

Heat Stroke

Dehydration

Worsening Allergies

Asthma

Mold Exposure

Food & Water Contamination

Vector-borne Diseases

Heat Waves

More Pollen

Rising Temperatures

Higher Carbon Dioxide Levels

Rising Sea Levels

Changes in Air Quality

Coastal Erosion

A Project By

CIER
Centre for Indigenous Environmental Resources

For helpful resources,
please scan the QR code

Climate change impacts physical health by reducing access to clean water, food, air, and medical care.

For example, rising temperatures can lead to heat waves and wildfires, increasing the risk of heat stroke and dehydration.

Physical Health